

Soviet Version to Be: CIA Lured Her Away

MOSCOW, May 22 (AP)—The Soviet version of Svetlana Alliluyeva's defection, accusing the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency of luring Stalin's daughter away, will be given soon, informed sources said today.

The Communist Party newspaper Pravda will, these informants said, publish an article based on findings of a high-level investigation into the case.

The high-level investigation was ordered as a result of Kremlin leaders' anger at the harm done by the defection and their apprehension of damage yet to come. They are reported worried about the effect of Mrs. Alliluyeva's memoirs being published just before celebrations here Nov. 7 of the 50th anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution.

The informants suggested the case was one—but not the only—cause of the ouster last week of Vladimir Y. Semichastny from the chairmanship of the Soviet secret police organization known as KGB.

Unconfirmed reports say Semichastny has been kicked downstairs to the unimportant but comfortable job of a deputy premier of the Soviet Union's Ukraine region, his home area.

According to the sources, the Pravda article will say the investigation showed that CIA agents worked subtly over a long period to turn Mrs. Alliluyeva's mind against the present regime.

These agents, identified by the informants as Russians who had been subverted by the CIA earlier, also were accused of links with the smuggling abroad of important Soviet documents and anti-Soviet underground writings.

The agents were said to have been caught, but the KGB has been blamed for laxity and ineptitude.

ARE CASTRO GUERRILLAS EQUIPPED IN THE U. S.?

WASHINGTON—Agents of Cuba's Fidel Castro have been buying surplus U. S. Army-type equipment, possibly to supply guerrillas operating in Latin America, according to FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover.

Mr. Hoover told a House Appropriations Subcommittee that members of the Cuban mission to the United Nations made the purchases. Items he listed as being bought: combat boots, jungle hammocks, military canteens, leather holsters for .45-caliber automatics, cartridge belts, bayonets and combat knives.

Said Mr. Hoover:

"A possibility is that Castro will use the material to equip pro-Castro guerrilla groups in Latin America so that, in the event of their capture, there will be no way of associating the equipment with the Cuban Government."

Mr. Hoover's testimony was released shortly after Venezuelan officials announced interception of a 12-man guerrilla landing force led by Cuban Army officers. Four Cubans and eight Cuban-trained Venezuelans were discovered sneaking ashore in rubber rafts about 90 miles east of Caracas. Venezuela has been a prime target of Castro's agents.
